DESCRIPTION

Set amid a row of six townhouses, this four-story residence is a delightful showcase of period architectural detail. From the restored front stoop to the classic wainscoting and built-in mirrors, 143 West 120th has been lovingly cared for and maintained. It is located on a perfect block in this up-and-coming section of Harlem.

The building is nineteen feet wide, and, while it is currently configured as two studios and three floor-through apartments, it is primed for the creation of a marvelous owner's duplex or triplex on the lower floors using the interior staircase. Meanwhile, the upper floors command an impressive free-market rent roll and boast wonderful ceiling height and natural light. The kitchens and baths are renovated to incorporate modern, open layouts and new appliances that include stackable washer/dryers. There is also a deep, private garden with mature trees - some of the prettiest in the neighborhood - and a terrace that is accessible from the fourth floor apartment.

Situated near Marcus Garvey Park, both local and express subway lines, and trendy eateries, this townhouse is full of unique possibilities for all types of buyers.

LAYOUT

Garden Level

Adjacent to the front stoop, a woodsy courtyard leads to a private entrance for the two apartments that occupy the garden level. The garden front is a modest studio with a fireplace, renovated kitchen, and full bathroom. The rear of this floor hosts a larger studio apartment. It is configured as an open common room with a one-wall kitchen and a full bathroom towards the back. The rear apartment also has exclusive access to a peaceful garden and the townhouse cellar.
